TOMMY ROY
Lead Golf Producer, NBC Sports

Tommy Roy, NBC Sports' longtime golf producer and former NBC Sports' Executive Producer for 12 years, is one of the most decorated and respected producers in sports television history. A 29-time Emmy Award-winner, Roy has produced or executive produced the television broadcasts of many of the world's biggest sporting events, including the The Olympics, the Super Bowl, NBA Finals, College Football National Championship, Kentucky Derby, Daytona 500 and Wimbledon.

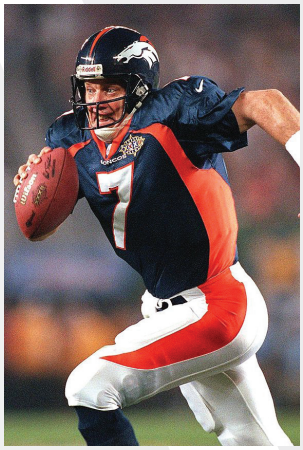
Roy's has produced golf for NBC Sports for the past 25 years, a span that includes the network's PGA TOUR broadcasts, the PLAYERS Championship, major championships including the U.S. Open, U.S. Women's Open and the Open Championship (British Open), the biennial Ryder Cup and Presidents Cup matches and the PGA TOUR's FedExCup Playoffs.

In his 30+ years in sports television, Roy has produced the television broadcasts of many of world's biggest sporting events and most iconic moments, including:

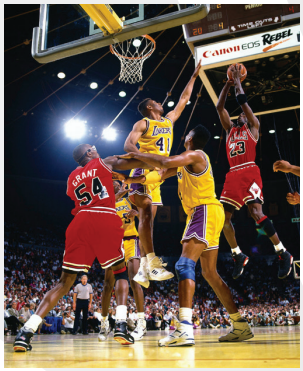
The Summer and Winter Olympic Games
1992 Summer Olympics: The Inaugural "Dream Team." Roy produced basketball coverage at the 1992 Summer Olympics in Barcelona, Spain, where the U.S. men's national basketball team – more commonly known as The Dream Team which featured Michael Jordan, Magic Johnson, Larry Bird, Patrick Ewing and Charles Barkley– earned gold medal with an undefeated Olympic campaign.

2008 Summer Olympics: Michael Phelps' Eight Gold Medals. Roy produced coverage of the Olympics' most iconic achievement: Michael Phelps winning a record eight gold medals at the 2008 Summer Olympics in Beijing. Roy produced swimming coverage of every Olympic medal-winning race in Phelps' career, 28 medals in total, the most decorated Olympian of all time.

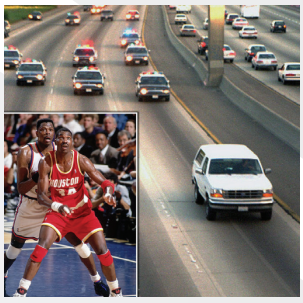
Super Bowl
Super Bowl XXXII: John Elway's first Super Bowl win. After suffering three defeats in previous Super Bowl appearances, John Elway led the Denver Broncos to win their first Super Bowl in team history over Bret Favre and the Green Bay Packers, 31-24. Roy produced television coverage of Super Bowl XXXII in 1997, NBC's final Super Bowl production until 2006.



NBA Finals
Michael Jordan's first three NBA Championships, 1991-93. Roy produced NBC Sports' television coverage for Michael Jordan's first three NBA championships with the Chicago Bulls (1991, '92, 93).



1994 NBA Finals / O.J. Simpson Car Chase
Arguably one of the craziest sports and news/culture crossover moments in television history. Roy produced a "double box" during Game 5 of the 1994 NBA Finals between the Houston Rockets and the New York Knicks, while the world simultaneously watched history play out on live television by following O.J. Simpson's police car chase.



College Football National Championship
The 1995 Orange Bowl: Tom Osbourne's First National Championship. Roy produced the television broadcast of the 61st Orange Bowl Classic, where Nebraska defeated Miami 24-17, the first national championship for legendary coach Tom Osbourne.

The U.S. Open
2008 U.S. Open: Tiger Woods' Unlikely 14th Major Championship Win. One of the most dramatic U.S. Opens in history, Tiger Woods defeated Rocco Mediate via a 19-hole playoff for his 14th major championship. He revealed two days later that he was playing on a double stress fracture on his left leg.

In total, Roy produced 20 U.S. Open championships for NBC Sports from 1995-2014.

The Ryder Cup
1999 Ryder Cup: The Battle At Brookline. Following U.S. Captain Ben Crenshaw's "I got a feeling" press conference, the United States team generated the largest come-from behind victory to defeat Europe 14 ½ - 13 ½.

2012 Ryder Cup: The Miracle at Medinah: Europe matched the United States' achievement in 1999 with a come-from-behind victory on the final day down 10-6, to win 14 ½ - 13 ½, retaining the Ryder Cup on U.S. soil.

Roy has produced every Ryder Cup for NBC Sports since 1993.

The Open (British Open)
2016 Open: Henrik Stenson and Phil Mickelson's Epic Final Round Duel. In what earned instant acclaim as one of the greatest final round duels in major championship history, Henrik Stenson outlasted Phil Mickelson with a final-round 63 (65 for Mickelson) en-route to breaking the aggregate scoring record for all major championships.

TOUR Championship
2018 TOUR Championship: Tiger Woods' 80th PGA TOUR Win. Featuring one of the more dramatic visuals in recent sports history with the gallery walking behind Tiger Woods on the 18th hole, Woods captured his 80th PGA TOUR win, arguably one of the biggest comebacks in sports history following multiple back surgeries.

Roy joined NBC Sports in 1981 as a production associate, hired by legendary producer and television executive Don Ohlmeyer, who at the time was NBC Sports' executive producer. Roy garnered the attention from NBC while serving as a runner for an NBC golf event while in college at the University of Arizona, and made a steady climb through the ranks.

An associate producer from 1983-86, Roy was promoted to producer in 1986. During this time, he served as lead producer for NBC's college basketball coverage, NBA coverage, co-producer for the network's PGA TOUR, LPGA Tour and Senior Tour golf telecasts and studio producer for NBC's NFL pre-game shows.

In 1993, Roy was promoted to executive producer, NBC Sports, which he held for 12 years. During his tenure, he continued as lead producer for the network's NBA, golf and NFL coverage, and executive produced three Super Bowls, XXVIII, XXX and XXXII.

Roy has been involved with every Summer Olympic Games since 1988 and every Winter Olympic Games since 2002. He served as co-executive producer of the 1996 Atlanta Olympics and 2000 Sydney Olympics alongside television legend Dick Ebersol. Roy continues to serve as producer for swimming and speedskating events at the Summer and Winter Olympics, respectively.

In 2005, Roy transitioned to golf full-time, continuing his role as lead producer for the network's golf coverage, a position he has held since 1993.

Currently, Roy is lead producer for NBC Sports' year-round PGA TOUR coverage, highlighted by THE PLAYERS Championship – one of the most technological advanced events on PGA TOUR – and the FedExCup Playoffs; major championship coverage including The Open (British Open), KPMG Women's PGA Championship and the Senior PGA Championship; and the biennial Ryder Cup and Presidents Cup matches.

Roy comes from a golfing family. His late father, Billy Roy, was a PGA Professional for 50 years, including 23 as the club professional at the Country Club of Green Valley in Tucson. He graduated from the University of Arizona in 1981 with a degree in Business Administration. Roy lives in Ponte Vedra, Fla., with his wife, Anne. They have two children, Billy and Kelly.
